WOMEN IN POLITICS.

THEY ARE NATURALLY PROGRESSIVE

AND QUICKLY GLAD TO REFORMS.

One Has Recently Visited the Great

Political Gathering—Another Was a Political Delegate—Colorado the State in Recognition of the New Woman.

(Copyright, 1895, by American Press Assoc.)

For the first time on record a woman has wielded the gavel over a political gathering. And the honor was most fitly bestowed when it was given to Henrietta G. Moore at the recent convention of prohibitionists at Springfield,

O. The novelty of a woman presiding caused a great deal of enthusiasm, and when Miss Moore arose to speak the audience greeted her with waving handkerchiefs and shouts of applause. Miss Moore's speech was considered the most masterly ever made at the opening of a political convention. It pleaded for the suppression of the liquor traffic, the enfranchisement of women, government control of all means of communication and transportation, abolition of all monopolies and a financial system that will insure money to the people in sufficient quantity for all needs, remonet-ization of silver and the like. It was a most able and logical plea for all the reforms of the day.

Miss Moore is a graceful, attractive looking woman, with a bright, intelligent face, showing great strength of character, soft brown eyes and dark hair. She was a delicate, fragile child and was therefore not sent to school in her early childhood, but was encouraged to spend her time in the open air, thereby gaining health and vital force.

Becoming possessed of some books, she had a great desire to know what the strange characters in them meant. So she began to read by carrying her book to her mother when she failed in a word or character. At 15 years of age she became a teacher in order to aid her parents in some financial difficulties.

She became a prohibitionist not because she had heard of the evils of intemperance, but because she knew. A beloved brother had been tempted from her side into the saloon. She went to the saloon keeper and begged him not to sell her brother liquor, but he would give her no promise. One evening she saw her brother and the mayor of the town enter the saloon together. What could she do—she, a slender, delicate young woman—against a heavy, in-cessed liquor dealer? She could not do much. The law would not help her, but she did what she could. She walked up the railroad track, gathered her apron full of stones, and returning sent them with a sure aim direct at the saloon windows. She was arrested, but she friends let her out, and she did not go to jail. This was the beginning of her temperance career.

When the crisis broke out, she was chosen to lead the band in her native village. Since that time she has developed into one of the strongest organizers of temperance unions in the United States, and there is scarcely a state or territory where her voice has not been heard in the prohibition cause.

From the time she taught herself to read she has been a persevering and indefatigable worker. While teaching in the daytime she spent many hours of the night in studying and arranging plans and lectures for her temperance union.

While traveling about the country in the interests of the prohibition cause she devoted all her spare moments in studying for the university and is now an ordained minister in the Universalist
